Circular No. 24/2025

Introducing Time Recording Spreadsheets for all Technical and Administrative Staff at the University of Bonn

Dear Sir or Madam, dear colleagues,

The purpose of today's circular is to inform you that the University of Bonn will be introducing uniform Excel spreadsheets for time recording for all technical and administrative staff (central and decentralized). This marks a first step in the preparations for bringing in a central electronic time recording platform at the University that will be used to manage working times and absences digitally in future.

Staff working in the central and decentralized administration who already use a time recording spreadsheet can continue to use it until December 31, 2025. They will need to switch to the new spreadsheets by January 1, 2026 at the latest but are welcome to do so beforehand if they prefer.

From September 1, 2025 onward, administrative staff who do not yet use an Excel spreadsheet for time recording should use the appropriate one for them:

- Spreadsheet for staff working a five-day week
- Spreadsheet for staff whose working hours vary week to week
- Spreadsheet for apprentices under 18

The current Civil Service Staff Council Agreement on Flexible Working Time will continue to apply to staff in Central Administration.

In addition, Botanic Garden and University IT staff will continue to be covered by the terms of their respective civil service staff council agreements. They will likewise be expected to use the new centrally supplied spreadsheets to record their working times from January 1, 2026 at the latest.

Bonn University and State Library staff will continue to use their existing time recording system, applying the latest version of their flextime guidelines.

The Service Portal has a page with detailed information on time recording for technical and administrative staff—simply click on this link. The time recording spreadsheets from 2025 can be downloaded from this page at any time, while those for 2026 will likewise be uploaded in due course.

In particular, administrative staff are asked to follow the guidelines relevant to them:

- Guidelines for Central Administration (based on the current civil service staff council agreement)
- Guidelines for Decentralized Administration

The time recording spreadsheets must be submitted electronically to the relevant line manager every month. In order to fulfill their duty of care, the line manager is required to check that the times recorded comply with the legal requirements and, if so, to approve them. In particular, they must focus on making sure that the target number of hours have been worked, that no maximum limits have been exceeded and that breaks and rest periods have been taken as stipulated. The time recording spreadsheets must be stored in an appropriate manner such that the files can only be accessed by the line manager and employee concerned. The spreadsheets are to be made available to Human Resources and/or to the Time Recording Administrative Specialist Petra Schüller on request if there is a justified need.

Please use the service form in the Service Portal if you have any technical or other specific queries. You are also invited at any time to consult the guidelines provided and the tips for filling in the time recording spreadsheets, which you can find by following the Service Portal link given above.

Thank you very much for your support!

Sincerely,

signed
